Zanesville Museum of Art Holds Back to School Day

ZANESVILLE, Ohio—The Zanesville Museum of Art is preparing to hold a Free Family Day this Saturday, August 25 at 2 pm. The museum holds these exciting events every quarter to allow families to experience the museum for free while participating in fun activities. Everyone is invited to the museum to enjoy this Free Family Day celebrating the back to school season.

This Free Family Day will feature several activities related to the new school year. With STEAM (Science Technology Engineering Arts Math) programs being ever more prevalent in schools, the museum is also working hard to keep arts education alive.

“Here at the ZMA, we are very passionate about how the visual arts enrich learning experiences and this is the perfect time of year to celebrate that in a really fun way,” said ZMA Education Coordinator Misty Johnson.

The museum will have three stations set up for guests to enjoy. All three focus on a specific school subject, such as science, math, and language arts. Children and parents will enjoy using magnets to create art, experimenting with shapes to make stunning tessellations, and using words and letters to make fun and creative works of art. In addition to the several arts activities featured during the Free Family Day, there will be live music by Mark Snider and Jay Wince, as well as complimentary refreshments.
